Winnie the Pooh

Winnie the Pooh had a problem. He was out of honey. And for Pooh, having no honey was a big problem. This heartfelt tale follows the 'silly old bear', as he searches for his favourite golden treat. Along the way, he encounters Eeyore, Tigger, Piglet, and other familiar faces that have endeared themselves to the world for the past century. Based on the original collection written by A.A. Milne, this story was released as a feature-film by Disney in 2011, and loses none of the humour or charm that made Winnie the Pooh a household name.

This unique gift has been created using original artwork. Reproduced in this beautiful square hardback, this book tells the full story of Winnie the Pooh, capturing the wonder of this iconic story within the pages. This tale has been printed just for you. This book is part of our Timeless range; a collection of stories which have stood the test of time, becoming classics in their own right. Each story is presented in a beautiful gift box, creating a traditional gift which captures the authenticity of Disney's creation. A premium gift for someone special.

There once was a boy named Christopher Robin who had a room full of wonderful toys to play with. Of all of these, the stuffed animals were his favourites—especially a bear called Winnie the Pooh.

Early one morning, Pooh slept in his cozy house dreaming of honey. Honey was his favourite thing to think and dream about, as well as his favourite thing to eat. And on those rare occasions when Pooh forgot about honey, his rumbling tummy was quick to remind him.

On this day, Pooh woke up to discover that his tummy was complaining especially loudly. He knew that the only way to quiet it was to fill it with lots of delicious honey. As Pooh dressed, he and his tummy sang a song together. (Well, Pooh sang the words, while his tummy made musical sounds, like Gurgle! and Pop!)

Pooh checked his cupboard first, sure there would be a pot full of the sweet stuff. "Empty," observed Pooh.

Pooh continued his search, checking under his bed and on the ledge above his door. Unfortunately, every honeypot he found was lacking the "honey" part. Finally, he came upon a jar he felt sure was full. He tipped it back farther . . . and farther . . . and farther . . . until the weight of the pot tipped him right over!

Sensing that Pooh had been distracted from his task, his stomach issued forth several more hungry and impatient sounds. Pooh realised since there was no honey to be found inside, he had to venture out into the Hundred-Acre Wood to find some more.

Suddenly, Pooh spotted some bees. Where there were bees, there was usually honey, so Pooh felt hopeful—and a little cautious. He had learned that beehives could be very unfriendly places when the bees were home!

Pooh reached inside the beehive. A big, angry swarm poured out of the hive, and Pooh took off running. Luckily, he stumbled upon the perfect hiding spot. He vowed that just as soon as the bees were gone he would pay his friends a visit. Surely one of them would have some honey to spare.

By the time Pooh came upon Eeyore, the donkey was thoughtfully chewing on some thistles. "Good morning, Eeyore," said Pooh. "You wouldn't happen to have any honey lying about, would you?"

Without waiting for an answer, Pooh crawled inside Eeyore's house to have a look for himself. Pooh came out empty-handed, finally stopping to take a good, long look at his friend. "Eeyore," said Pooh, "what has happened to your tail? It isn't there," Pooh explained.

"What is there?" asked Eeyore.

"Nothing," replied Pooh.

"That accounts for a good deal," observed Eeyore.
