

in the book with...

The Ultimate

Disney • PIXAR

TOY STORY

Collection

CREATED ESPECIALLY FOR NIKKI

in the book with...

The Ultimate Toy Story Collection

Especially for Nikki

Hope you like this book
Love Tim xxx

Nikki And The Toy Olympics

It was a well-known fact that Eliza had the most vivid of imaginations. When going on long journeys, Eliza loved nothing better than to daydream about extraordinary, magical things. On one particularly long coach trip, Eliza imagined a big athletics stadium, filled with toys that were alive! Eliza was sitting in the stands among thousands of cheering toys, and could see a large sign that read 'The Toy Olympics'.

"Ladies and Gentlemen, Toys and Girls," echoed a big booming voice over the stadium loudspeakers. It was Hamm the Piggybank! "Welcome to the annual Toy Olympics! As usual, there will be four events: the 100-meter hurdles, the javelin, the hammer throw, and the long jump. The winner of each event will win a magnificent golden trophy!" Eliza and the rest of the crowd cheered.

"So, without further ado," continued Hamm, "let the games begin!"

The first event was the 100-meter hurdles. Eliza could see the toys lining up in their lanes. There was Sheriff Woody the cowboy, Wheezy the squeaky penguin, Slinky Dog, Mrs Potato Head, and Woody's trusty horse Bullseye.

"Come on Woody you can do it!" cried Eliza.

The toys waved to the crowds before focusing on the race. Hamm was back on the loudspeaker. "On your marks, get set, GO!" The toys set off, Woody had taken the lead with Bullseye just behind him.

Suddenly there was a loud crashing noise. Slinky Dog had wrapped himself up around one of the hurdles! He was stuck!

"Oh no, someone help Slink!" said Eliza. Woody was still leading the race, but he seemed to hear Eliza calling, and looked back to see Slinky Dog helpless on the hurdle. Without hesitation, he turned back and ran to help his friend. Bullseye watched Woody run back and decided that he would help too. Woody jumped on his back and cried "Run like the wind Bullseye!" Within moments, they had arrived with Slinky and untangled him from the hurdle.

"Golly bob howdy, thanks Woody! said Slinky Dog, but you're not gonna win the race now!"

"Aw the race doesn't matter Slink, what matters is my friends," said Woody.

"And the race is OVER!" yelled Hamm through his microphone. "The winner - Mrs Potato Head! A special mention must go to Woody and his trusty steed Bullseye for a heroic rescue act!" Eliza and the crowd went wild, chanting for Woody and Bullseye.

The second event of the games was the javelin throw. Barbie, Ken and Emperor Zurg had all thrown, with just Mr Potato Head left to compete. Barbie had currently thrown the furthest and was in 1st place.

"I wish I was winning," said Ken, "but if anyone's going to beat me then I'm glad it's you Barbie."

"Excuse me!" said Mr Potato Head. "Nobody's winning this event but me!" Eliza chuckled.

With that, Mr Potato Head grabbed a javelin and took his turn. The javelin flew high into the air and looked to have beaten Barbie's throw! However, Eliza realized that it wasn't the javelin that had gone that far, but Mr

Potato Head's arm!

"Potato Head, your arm is NOT a javelin, you finish last!" shouted Hamm. "Barbie wins!"

"Oh come on!" shouted Potato Head, who threw his nose on the floor in frustration.

"Next up is the hammer throw," said Hamm. Rex the Dinosaur was competing in this event. Eliza wasn't quite sure how he would manage to throw with such tiny arms and claws.

To Eliza and everybody else's surprise, Rex managed to throw the furthest, beating his competitors who included Big Baby and Stinky Pete.

As he held the trophy, Rex said "I've beaten Zurg and now I've won the hammer throw. This is unbelievable!"

Eliza was happy for Rex, who was grinning from ear to ear.

"It's time for the final event of the Games," bellowed Hamm. Eliza thought that Hamm's voice seemed louder than ever, the loud speakers vibrated and shook with his every word. "Yes, it's time for the long jump! Who will be victorious?"

The long jump competitors were Buzz Lightyear, Jessie the Cowgirl, Chuckles the Clown, Mr Pricklepants the Hedgehog and Trixie the Triceratops. Eliza really wasn't sure who would win this one. Buzz was up first and began his run up to the long sand pit.

"To infinity, and beyond!" he cried as he leapt into the air. At this moment Buzz's wings opened up, helping him to glide effortlessly over the long jump pit before landing on the other side of it. The crowd cheered, but Hamm was not impressed.

"Buzz Lightyear," said the ultra-loud voice of Hamm.

"This event is the long jump, but you didn't jump, you flew! Because of that, you are DISQUALIFIED."

Eliza gasped.

"I wasn't flying!" protested Buzz. "I was falling, with style."

Despite Buzz's protest, he was officially disqualified. There were only 4 toys left to compete, and it was Jessie who managed to jump the furthest, winning the long jump trophy!

"Yee-haw!" exclaimed Jessie. "I won I won, Whoo-Wee! Oh um, sorry Buzz." Jessie had realized that Buzz was standing next to her.

"Nothing to apologize for Jessie," said Buzz, smiling. "I came over to congratulate you. I should never have used my wings to get an advantage. The best toy won."

Jessie smiled at Buzz, before the loud speaker began to reverberate around the stadium once more.

"Thank you all for attending the Toy Olympics, and congratulations to the winners," said Hamm. "Now, before you leave, let's party!"

With that, Hamm's voice was replaced with music being played by Rex, who was now a DJ! Eliza got up with the rest of the toys and began to dance. It was then that Eliza snapped out of the daydream. The music was actually coming from the radio on the coach! As the coach arrived back home, Eliza got off, excited about the next trip when more magical daydreams could be had.

Contents

Toy Story 6-21

Toy Story 2 ... 22-35

Toy Story 3..... 36-61

Toy Story 4 62-83

Space Adventure... 84-93

Woody's Wild-West
Rescue 94-103

Sunnyside
Boot Camp 104-III

Disney · PIXAR
TOY
STORY

Andy was a young boy with a big imagination. He loved playing with all his toys, but his all-time favorite was Sheriff Woody, a pull-string cowboy doll. Andy spent hours playing with Woody - together, they fought bad guys, rescued good guys, and had all kinds of exciting adventures.

"C'mon Woody!" Andy called, holding Woody's arm as he ran through the house. Andy took Woody everywhere. The two had been the best of friends ever since Andy was in kindergarten.

Just then, Andy's mother called out that his friends were about to arrive.

"It's party time!" Andy shouted happily, running back to his room to get his little sister. "See you later, Woody." He dropped Woody off and headed downstairs with Molly. Because he was Andy's favorite toy, Woody even had his own special spot on Andy's bed.

After Andy and Molly left, the room was quiet for a moment.

Then, Woody sat up and rubbed his head. "Okay, everybody, coast is clear!" he shouted. One by one, all the toys peeked out of the closet, from beneath the bed, and out of the toy chest. Mr Potato Head, Hamm, Slinky, RC, Rex, and Bo Beep all stretched and chatted as they came out, just as they did every time there were no humans around to see them.

ESPECIALLY FOR NIKKI

But Woody didn't have time for howdy-dos. He had important news.

Trying not to seem tense, Woody gathered the toys for a special meeting. First, he reminded them that only one week remained before Andy and his family would move to a new house. Then he blurted out the big news: "Andy's birthday party has been moved to today."

All the toys started squeaking and shouting! The toys always dreaded Andy's birthday, because they feared some newer, fancier toy might replace them. And this year, the party was being held earlier than usual because of the move.

"They're here!" Hamm shouted suddenly. Looking out the window, he had spotted Andy's guests starting to arrive.

The toys watched nervously as Andy's friends walked up the front steps.

"Take a look at all those presents!" Hamm exclaimed.

"They're getting bigger!" Rex cried out anxiously. Each present seemed bigger and more worrisome than the next. What was inside all those packages?

"Sergeant, establish a recon post downstairs. Code red!" Woody sent the Green Army Men downstairs to spy on Andy's party.

Using a jump rope, the soldiers scrambled down to the first floor, then set up a baby monitor inside a potted plant. Hidden, the soldiers broadcast descriptions of the presents as they were unwrapped, sending the news back to Andy's room.

ESPECIALLY FOR NIKKI

Luckily, nothing sounded too threatening . . . until the last package. All the kids gasped as they saw -

Just then, the baby monitor cut out. The toys were frantic! What was that last present?

Suddenly, Andy and his friends burst into the bedroom. They ran around happily, then rushed out again - leaving the mystery toy in Woody's special spot.

In the excitement, Woody had fallen on the floor. All the toys watched anxiously as he climbed back up onto the bed.

"Howdy," Woody introduced himself.

The new toy turned and blinked. He was white and green and stood with his hands on his hips. "I am Buzz Lightyear, Space Ranger," he declared. He claimed to be a space hero who had just landed on Earth.

He also claimed he could fly. Then he tried to prove it, by bouncing off a ball and shouting,

"To infinity and beyond!"

The other toys were impressed, but Woody rolled his eyes. "That's just falling with style," he complained.

Poor Woody. Once Buzz arrived in Andy's room, nothing was the same.

The cowboy posters on the wall were replaced with space posters. Andy stopped wearing his cowboy hat, and started running through the house in a space costume.

Buzz was a hit with the other toys, too.

Everyone wanted to spend time with him.

But the biggest shock was at bedtime. When Andy climbed under the covers, he took Buzz with him. Woody was left in the toy chest, awkward, alone, and forgotten.

One evening, Andy's mom suggested a trip to Pizza Planet. Andy could take only one toy to the restaurant, and Woody wanted to make sure he was chosen.

Woody's plan was to knock Buzz behind the desk, where Andy couldn't find him. But instead, Buzz fell out the window.

"It was an accident!" Woody tried to explain to the other toys.

"Didn't want to face the fact that Buzz just might be Andy's new favorite toy, so you got rid of him!" Mr Potato Head glared at Woody.

Before the toys could gang up on Woody, however, Andy ran into the room. He searched high and low for Buzz, but couldn't find the space ranger anywhere.

Finally, he grabbed Woody. Then he ran downstairs and hopped into the car with Molly and his mother, headed toward Pizza Planet.

As the car's motor started up, a small figure emerged from the bushes and leapt onto the car's bumper. It was Buzz!

When Andy's mom stopped at a gas station, Buzz jumped into the back seat with Woody.

"Buzz! You're alive!" Woody exclaimed in relief.

But Buzz wasn't so pleased to see Woody.

"Even though you tried to terminate me, revenge is not an idea we promote on my planet," Buzz said. Then his eyes narrowed. "But we're not on my planet, are we?"

Buzz leaped onto Woody, and the two began pummeling each other. As they wrestled angrily, they tumbled out of the car and onto the pavement.

Suddenly, Andy's mom drove off - without them! Woody and Buzz were stranded at the gas station.

Luckily, Woody spotted a Pizza Planet delivery truck. The truck could take him to Andy! But Woody knew he couldn't face the other toys without Buzz. So he tricked Buzz, saying that the truck was a shuttle that could return him to his home planet.

At Pizza Planet, Woody quickly spotted Andy. With a little luck, he figured, they could jump into Molly's stroller.

End of Sample